Pete Sparber is a Philadelphia-based artist whose drawing practice examines the theater of contemporary culture through dense narrative compositions. He holds an MFA from Cornell University and returned to full-time studio work after a long global career in corporate leadership, including six years in Shanghai and Tokyo.

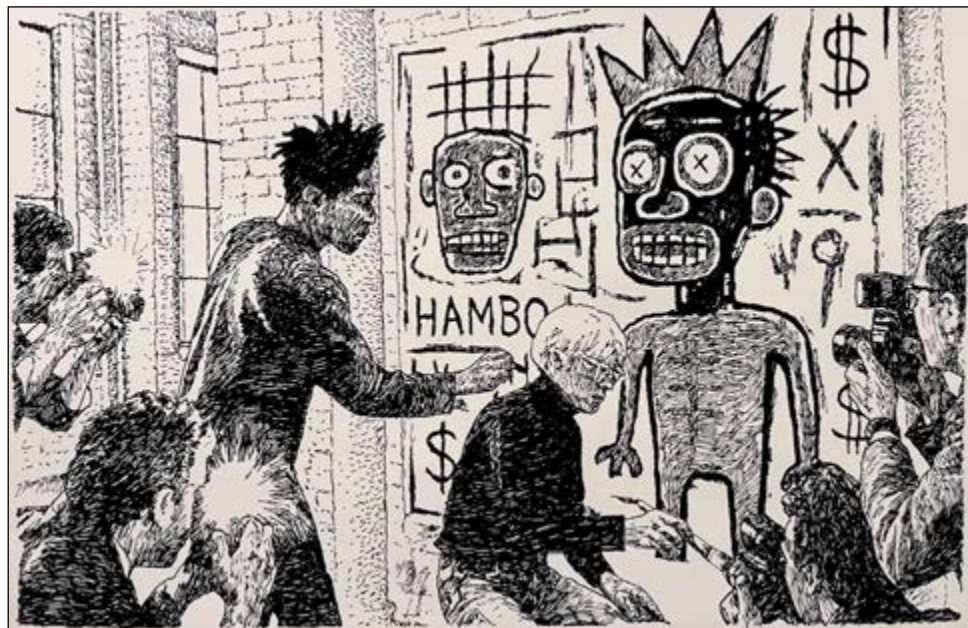

A contributing writer for Artblog, Sparber has published numerous interviews and reviews, and is currently working with InLiquid artist's collective to found Art & Image Philadelphia, an online journal covering the Philadelphia visual arts ecosystem.

Pete currently lives in Center City, Philadelphia with his wife, Karen Cooper.
